Calls On Israelis To Liquidate Black Market In Food

When Dr. Dov Joseph, Minister of Commerce and Industry of Israel, broadcast to the nation on the position of the food supply, he opened with an attack on the black market he said had grown within the year and had created its own vicious circle. People with means paid any price, workers sought increased wages to keep pace with the weakening value of the currency, in turn leading to a spiralling of prices. He stressed not only the effects in themselves but that they brought in their wake a drop in the morale. He called upon the people, who by their self-sacrifice had created great achievements in the past, not longer to endanger "the dearest thing we possess, our Statehood" by resorting to the black market, and urged them to outroot this evil from their midst.

The Minister outlined the nature of Israel's food problem and the steps he will take to tackle it. He said that an abundance of food could be easily guaranteed if Israel were prepared to cease immigration, neglect defense, or show indifference to the upbuilding of the country and economic self-sufficiency. This would be the easy solution if indeed it were a solution at all. "But it is not for us," Dr. Joseph said. "Israel needs to develop the country, expand the agricultural and industrial development and increase production and exports in order to achieve economic self-sufficiency."

He pointed out the economic problems as follows:

(1) Israel does not produce enough for its needs; (2) the growth of production has not kept pace with the population; (3) Israel does not possess enough foreign exchange for all its food needs. Other goods in addition to food must be imported; (4) production for export which could provide foreign exchange has not developed fast enough for the needs; (5) the constant expansion of the population constantly expands the volume of foreign exchange required for food imports.

"It is no secret that the food stocks situation and the current shortage of foreign exchange are producing serious difficulties for the immediate future, but I am convinced that if we succeed in overcoming the tough few months ahead, it will be possible so to arrange our affairs that the public will receive in an organized fashion the basic minimums essential to health and ability to work. The Government has decided to give priority allocations of foreign exchange to the import of essential foods over all other imports. This priority will not cover all foods the public would like but only essentials which will be fixed by an interministerial committee in accordance with whose decision the treasury each month will order absolute priority."

Dr. Joseph continued that the primary effort would be agricultural production by diverting thousands of immigrants to agriculture from public works and demanding that the existing farming community increase productivity by exploiting new equipment for the growing of essential crops rather than purely revenue from raising crops. Farmers would have to grow whatever is capable of being grown, locally which hitherto has been imported. He cited the example of $64,000,000 currently annually needed to feed the population, of which $18,000,000 is spent on imported fodder of which $14,000,000 worth is producable locally. Within a year or at the most two, the import of such fodder must cease and it must be grown locally.

Dr. Joseph said that he would consider anew the ration of imported food that it was possible to distribute. The population could be assured that it would receive the maximum possible and whatever ration was promised would be honored and distributed in the most orderly way possible with a minimum of discomfort. He admitted that the food queues were a great hardship, but no country which has experienced rationing has discovered a device for abolishing queuing. He promised, nevertheless, that he would do all in his power to reduce unnecessary suffering for the housewife and would take strong action against shopkeepers who were insolent or tried to profiteer.

The Minister touched on the psychological aspect of the food shortage: "The people are prepared to suffer food shortages if the known burden is evenly spread and they are assured that no one with an abundance of financial means and a poverty of conscience can resort to a black market. I give you a small example: We allowed members of the public with relatives and friends abroad to supplement their food supplies through SCRIP shops. This led to a considerable leakage to the black market. We will have to consider the problem afresh. It is essential not to give

Urges U.S. To Revise Entry System

Edward Corsi, State Industrial Commissioner and chairman of the New York State Displaced Persons Commission, called for revision of American immigration policies "to give affirmative evidence of our intention to recognize the equality of all people who fight with us for freedom."

Calling the old immigration laws "archaic and discriminatory," Mr. Corsi said it was in America's self-interest to create new immigration machinery before temporary legislation expires and the International Refugee Organization ends its work next year. He addressed 600 former refugees at the Astor Hotel in New York at the tenth annual meeting of the American and European Friends of Organization for Rehabilitation Through Training, a Jewish rehabilitation organization.

"In keeping with American world leadership and to make our allies strong," Mr. Corsi said, "we should join with other nations in relieving population pressures and revise our immigration policy of quotas by national origin. Unused quotas of one country should be assigned to others." He also urged creation of an international agency to replace the International Refugee Organization before next year.

Dr. William Haber, president of the Organization for Rehabilitation Through Training, and William Rosenwald, national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, also spoke.

U.S. Settlers Are Only One Percent In Israel

Hotels in the Israeli-held part of Jerusalem are full of American Jewish tourists, but American Jews who as immigrants and remain are rare. Since the state was formed three years ago, only about 10 per cent of the immigrants have been Americans. It is estimated that 2,500 American Jews are resident in Israel. They are scattered among a dozen collective settlements, holding jobs as specialists in various schools.

Americans find it hard to readjust themselves from the United States standard of living to Israel's austerity conditions and also to fit themselves into a society in which Central and East European and Oriental Jews predominate. Many who went there with burning Zionist idealism have departed disillusioned, reports the New York Times.

In a frank effort to meet these problems and create conditions that would attract more immigrants from North America, United States and Canadian Jews last May formed an association of Americans resident in Israel. "If our services are wanted, we now meet immigrants at the boat or airport, find them temporary housing and help steer them toward jobs," Michael Elkins, chairman of the group's Jerusalem branch, said.

Even the most ardent American Zionists find it hard to put up with one room for a whole family, which is all that the country can offer to most of the immigrants at present, he said to the New York Times. The association has devised a plan to bring in its own prefabricated houses. Mr. Elkins said the association had found an Italian manufacturer who was willing to supply houses that could be sold for $2,500, plus 800 Israeli pounds ($2,248). The houses have three rooms—two bedrooms and a living room—as well as a bathroom, kitchen and porch and would be equipped with electric heaters.

The association hopes to set up fifty of these houses each in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Haifa. The moving spirit behind the association is its chairman, Dr. Herman Pomeranz, formerly of Chicago, who has lived in Palestine more than a decade and now directs the Motza Sanitarium. The executive secretary is Moshe Goldberg, who was formerly a personnel specialist in New York and who went to Israel in 1948 as an army volunteer.

Mr. Elkins is director of documentary films and his wife, Martha, the task of setting job standards for Israel's new civil service. Of the American Jews who have gone there and stayed, the best known are Simon Agran-

Says Jewish Units Can Unite Easily

Prof. Robert M. MacIver, of Columbia University, one of the nation's leading sociologists, said in Chicago, Ill., that despite ideological differences among Jewish organizations there could be effective cooperation among all Jewish groups in combatting anti-Semitism, protecting civil rights and promoting intergroup relations.

His address was to the twentieth annual general assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, the coordinating body of 800 Jewish community organizations that annually raise more than 90 per cent of all funds for Jewish needs in the United States and throughout the world.

Professor MacIver's recent report on Jewish community-relations activities evoked sharp discussion and debate among the major national Jewish organizations as well as local groups. To avoid what he termed overlapping in the field, he had proposed a new division of responsibilities among Jewish groups interested in civil liberties, interfaith activities and labor and veterans' programs.

He has proposed that the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith should yield their work with veterans' groups to the Jewish War Veterans, their interfaith activities to the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, and their labor programs to the Jewish Labor Committee. He also proposed a redivision of civil rights activities among the American Jewish Committee, the Anti-Defamation League and the American Jewish Congress.

At Atlantic City last month, the National Community Relations Advisory Council, the coordinating body of six national Jewish groups and twenty-seven local bodies, had unanimously adopted a special committee report based on the MacIver study. However, the report contained an amendment that gave the agencies the right to dissent from any majority vote when the committee made its recommendations at the next convention of the Advisory Council next June. The recommendations call for a reorganization of activities among Jewish groups, strengthening of the Advisory Council and better financing for Jewish community relations activities.

In his talk before a panel on his report, Professor MacIver reiterated the findings of his report and asserted that he "did not in the least attack any ideology." In nine-tenths of the programs he scrutinized among Jewish groups, the professor asserted, he could find nothing that suggested "anything resembling a fundamental difference in ideologies."

The sociologist, whose study was financed by a group of Jewish welfare fund groups of several large cities, repudiated the theory that the "autonomy" of Jewish groups would suffer if they worked together. "Even if differences existed," he added, "this would represent no bar to the joining together of organizations."

"America," he asserted, "is a multi-group society. No group need give up its individual values. Differences should not stop unity if all parties are vitally concerned with the main objective." He paid strong tribute to the philanthropic activities of the Jewish people for giving devotedly and generously to causes they believe in," and added, "would it not be a pity that the results of their giving were impaired by the lack of cooperation in spending it."

Benjamin Ulin, of Boston, chairman of the large city budgeting conference, an informal grouping of welfare funds, affirmed the "urgent need for improvement" in the present operations of Jewish community - relations agencies. "There is room," he said, "for a good deal of improvement in the way the Jewish community is set up to do its community relations job. A considerably better job can be done with the funds that the community is now providing."

Irving Kane, chairman of the National Community Relations Advisory Council, asserted that the affiliated agencies of his organization at the meeting in Atlantic City last month, had agreed that "they are all engaged in a common cause and accountable to the whole Jewish community in whose cause they serve.

The subject of Israel's critical needs as well as national and local requirements have provided the principal themes for addresses. The speakers were Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, executive vice chairman of the United Jewish Ap-

Charges Germans Fail To Help Jews Make Comeback

Benjamin J. Buttenwieser, assistant United States high commissioner, said he was leaving Germany with the feeling that the German people were not trying as hard as they might to make up for the Nazi past. Mr. Buttenwieser said a "distressing" number of anti-Semitic utterances and actions still were observable at the same time that a percentage of Germans who wanted to "do the right thing" was "disappointingly small."

In connection with his views, he cited by name two members of the West German Cabinet, Dr. Thomas Dehler, Minister of Justice, and Dr. Hans Christoph Seebohm, Minister of Transport.

"The presence in the Government of ministers like Dehler and Seebohm is an indication that there is not sufficient public ostracism of people whose views, if judged by their utterances, are certainly far from reassuring," said Mr. Buttenwieser.

(Dr. Dehler, a Free Democrat, said in a speech in Hamburg in 1950 that "Hitler is to a great extent the consequence of the Versailles Treaty" and "Germany is no more guilty than France of World War I," sentiments that were widely criticized, particularly by the French. Dr. Seebohm, chairman of the German party, said, in a speech November 30, 1950, in Berlin, that not the German people, but only the German Army, had surrendered to the Allies in 1945.)

The retiring assistant high commissioner gave his impressions in an interview prior to his departure after having served there since September, 1945. His comments may be particularly interesting because in May, 1950, his scheduled address before the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith was canceled because league officials objected to its "general tenor."

[The "general tenor" of the canceled speech, according to a league announcement of May 14, 1950, was that Nazism in Germany had been destroyed. The announcement added that this was "an apologia for the limited job that has been done to denazify Germany; and gives aid and encouragement to those vicious elements in the 'new German nationalism' which Mr. Buttenwieser himself admits are re-emerging today."]

In an interview with the New York Times, Mr. Buttenwieser said he saw signs of a revival of "arrogant nationalism" in the statements by some political leaders, military leaders and organizations, particularly the veterans' organizations. He emphasized, however, that he felt Dr. Theodor Heuss, West German President, and Chancelor Konrad Adenauer were sincere and serious in their efforts to "do the right thing."

Asked to comment on the German scene as "an American of the Jewish faith," Mr. Buttenwieser said he had been disappointed at what he called the failure of the Germans to cooperate as much as they might have done to make it agreeable for Jews to live in Germany.

"I would have thought that the Germans, in general, would have had such a feeling of revulsion over the nightmare of the past that they would have gone more out of their way to help German Jews make a comeback," he said.

"These observations are limited, of course, because there are so few Jews, but in individual cases there is a distressing number of anti-Semitic utterances and actions."

The official German attitude on the question of restitutions and indemnifications has been "conceived in a noble spirit" but, the test will have to come in the fu-

B of M PRESIDENT WARNS GROWTH OF INFLATION IS STILL POSSIBLE

B. C. Gardner Calls for "Re-emphasis" on Saving; Analyzes Current and Long-Term Threats to Dollar

GORDON BALL, GENERAL MANAGER, ANNOUNCES RECORD TOTALS IN LOANS, DEPOSITS AND ASSETS

Montreal, Dec. 3 — While forecasting a "brilliant long-range future" for Canada, B. C. Gardner, president of the Bank of Montreal, sees a continuance of difficult economic problems facing the nation and emphasizes that "it would be very dangerous to conclude that the battle against inflation has been won."

Speaking to B of M shareholders at their 134th annual meeting here today, Mr. Gardner found encouragement in Canada's current monetary policies which were resulting in a "healthier and more realistic interest-rate structure, with the price of money once again beginning to exercise its traditional stabilizing function as a stimulus to saving and a brake on excessive expansion."

Warning that the possibility of further inflation was still "very real," the president traced both the short and long-term factors which threaten Canada's monetary stability.

Inflationary Factors

Mr. Gardner saw an immediate inflationary threat in the necessity of putting an increasing proportion of Canada's national output into defence and industrial expansion, with a consequent decrease of production for civilian consumption. A widening of the disparity between spending power and available consumer goods might result.

The long-term forces tending to undermine the value of the dollar were more deeply rooted, he stated. Among them he included: the political unpopularity of anti-inflationary policies; severe taxation which might encourage the wage-price spiral; and shorter working-hours at a time of heavy demand on the collective efforts of the population.

Looking at the positive side, Mr. Gardner stressed the need of a "great re-emphasis" on the value of saving as a stabilizing force. If savings failed to keep abreast of output going into capital production, inflationary pressures had to result. What was needed was to make saving worthwhile, to pay capital a "living wage."

General Manager's Address

Gordon R. Ball, general manager, presented the balance-sheet, showing total year-end assets of $2,222,000,000 as against $2,190,000,000 in 1950. The number of deposit accounts reached a new record figure — 1,873,519 — and deposits at $2,085,000,000 were up by $22,000,000. Current loans and discounts in Canada totalled $558 millions, compared with $480 millions a year earlier.

Reviewing the present "transitional period," Mr. Ball stated that more Canadians are employed today, at a higher income, than ever before. The delays in getting the defence program underway had, he felt, helped Canadians "gain a march" in forestalling scarcities of consumer goods that might otherwise have developed. More important, they were "rapidly extending the industrial foundations not only of a larger rearmament effort but also of a greater Canada in the years to come."

Warmly appreciative of "the loyal, devoted and efficient service" of the B of M staff, Mr. Ball said the past year was one of great activity in all departments of the bank. He added that the welfare of the staff, now over 10,000, was constantly under consideration, and that the bank had endeavoured to help solve their cost-of-living problems by the payment of monthly bonuses which were subject to review every six months.

peal; Harold Glasser, director of the council's Institute of Overseas Studies, and Bernard P. Kopkind, vice chairman of the council's National-Local Relations Committee.

Dr. Schwartz said that the United Jewish Appeal next year would still "be dominated by an atmosphere of emergency, with new problems facing the people of Israel." He said it was now urgent that the period of "homecoming" in Israel, which saw the influx of 700,000 immigrants in the last three and a half years, "be followed by a period of homemaking."

The appeal's official said that more than 73 per cent of all cash funds received by his agency to date this year — $55,000,000—had been made available for aid to the fledgling state.

The United Jewish Appeal's chief beneficiary is the United Palestine Appeal, which in turn provides the funds to the Jewish Agency for Palestine to carry out the immigration and resettlement programs of newcomers in Israel. Other beneficiaries of the U. J. A. are the Joint Distribution Committee and the United Service for New Americans.

Mr. Glasser asserted that Israel's current food shortage indicated that the new state had entered "a period of deep economic crisis." He said that the crisis could be resolved through an increase in agricultural production that would reduce reliance on food imports and lessen the strain on Israel's dollar resources.

Economic analysis indicated, however, he asserted, that "there is no real basis for the development of extremes of pessimism." Mr. Glasser said that Israel "has the potentiality for self-support of a population of 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 persons."

MARRIAGES

MONK-FREEDMAN

The marriage of Goldie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Freedman, Park Avenue, to David Monk, son of S. Monk, Plamondon Avenue, took place on October 27, at Bnai Jacob Synagogue, at half-past six o'clock. Dr. C. N. Denburg, Rabbi; Rabbi A. H. Greenberg and Reverend J. Rosenzweig officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was gowned in white net, embroidered with brocaded flowers. Fashioned with a high neckline, long net sleeves, a tight-fitted bodice, her dress had a very full skirt ending in a small train. Her fingertip tulle illusion veil was combined with a tight-fitted cap, embroidered with seed-pearl and other beads, and she carried a white Bible, adorned with two mauve orchids and white streamers. The groom was escorted by his brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mac Monk. Miss Shirley Freedman, sister of the bride, as maid of honour, wore a floor-length strapless gown of three shades of rose-colored net over taffeta, made with a full skirt; also a matching picture hat; and carried pink and white carnations. Sandra Cohen, as flower girl, wore a floor-length dress of blue taffeta, made with a pink sash; also a matching picture hat, and carried pink and white carnations. Sidney Monk, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Morris Freedman, brother of the bride; Irving Monk, nephew of the groom; Marvin Green and Saul Green, cousins of the bride; Harold Waxman, and Rubin Antecol. Manuel Witt, in full dress, was page boy. Flowers and white ribbon decorated the synagogue and the aisle. The wedding march was played. For the reception, in the hall of the synagogue, various flowers were used to adorn the tables. Mrs. Freedman, mother of the bride, received in a mauve-crepe floor-length gown, embroidered with silver sequins, a matching hat, and a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Monk, sister-in-law of the groom, wore a champagne-coloured strapless gown of net over taffeta, with brown accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses. BURY BOOKS AT CEREMONY

A thousand worn religious books were buried in a rare Jewish ceremony at Mount Carmel Cemetery in Los Angeles, Cal. They included prayer books, volumes of the Talmud and Bibles accumulated over two decades at Rodef Sholem-Etz Chayim Synagogue. Some of the books were in tatters, and the bindings of nearly all of them had given way because of use by countless readers. In a formal burial service the volumes were "laid to rest" in a cemetery plot bought specially for the purpose.

A hundred members of the congregation attended the hour-long ceremony. They brought the books, packed by the scores in white linen sacks, to the grave and cast them in. Then the grave was closed. Over the books will be erected a pyramid of stone, with a tablet saying that they are buried there.

One of the most effective aids to public health is education of the public through radio, newspapers and magazines, pamphlets, films and clinics. National, provincial and local health departments provide this free information in order that the public may learn how to avoid contagion, practise hygiene and sanitation, and improve child training. In addition, advice on nutrition for children and adults is distributed to those requesting it.

KNOBBY FRUIT LOAVES

• Scald 1½ c. milk, ⅔ c. granulated sugar, 2 tsps. salt and ½ c. shortening; cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile, measure into a large bowl ½ c. lukewarm water, 3 tsps. granulated sugar; stir until sugar is dissolved. Sprinkle with 3 envelopes Fleischmann's Fast Rising Dry Yeast. Let stand 10 minutes. THEN stir well.

Add lukewarm milk mixture and stir in 2 well-beaten eggs, ¼ c. maraschino cherry syrup and 1 tsp. almond extract. Stir in 4 c. once-sifted bread flour; beat until smooth. Work in 2 c. seedless raisins, 1 c. currants, 1 c. chopped candied peels, 1 c. sliced maraschino cherries and 1 c. broken walnuts. Work in 3½ c. (about) once-sifted bread flour. Knead on lightly-floured board until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl and grease top of dough. Cover and set in a warm place, free from draught. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Punch down dough, turn out on lightly-floured board and divide into 4 equal portions; cut each portion into 20 equal-sized pieces; knead each piece into a smooth round ball. Arrange 10 small balls in each of 4 greased loaf pans (4½" x 8½") and grease tops. Arrange remaining balls on top of those in pans and grease tops. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake in moderate oven, 350°, about 1 hour, covering with brown paper after first ½ hour. Spread cold loaves with icing. Yield — 4 loaves.

Note: The 4 portions of dough may be shaped into loaves to fit pans, instead of being divided into the small pieces that produce knobby loaves.

Finding Inner Peace

We are living in a world of dislocation. How can we, in such a world, keep ourselves balanced and sane and find inner peace? We need, in the first place, an attitude of mind that will be able to perceive that no matter how trying the experience of our time, "this too will pass." The old king in the ancient fable was given such an axiom by his wise men when he sought a summation of all wisdom in four or five simple words. This truth is abiding, that all passes and this truth is as applicable to such a human experience as a headache or even the present crisis.

This war will end, too, and may it end speedily, and laughter will yet be on the lips of humans who are at present undergoing martyrdom, suffering, and persecution. Then must we in such sorrowful days as ours seek great companions who have struggled and risen above defeats, the good companions of history, who despite all obstacles become pattern personalities, examples of courage.

Thus, it is comforting to walk the dark road of the present in the company of the Patriarch Isaac whose biography is so splendidly summarized in the traditional Torah portion of the past Sabbath. Isaac's life is a saga of defeats, but never is there recorded in Holy Writ that Isaac railed against fate. He accepted every experience that life offered and, with a contagious spirit of courage, met the challenges of every day.

As a child Isaac is taunted by his older brother, Ishmael. Then what a shock it is to the youth when he learns that he is about to be offered as a sacrifice. His mother, Sarah, unexpectedly dies. He marries and, when blessed with two boys, these, due to their strife, bring no peace to the household. At an old age Isaac must leave home and travel to dwell among the Philistines, due to famine. Then, too, people become jealous of his achievements there and Isaac seeks a home elsewhere, in the Valley of Geror. From here, too, he must move because of the quarrels of his herdsmen with those of his neighbours.

What a continuous succession of disappointments accompany Isaac! And then as the climax of a tragic life, Isaac is struck with blindness and even then his sons try to outwit each other in obtaining their blind father's blessing. Isaac is the perfect example of a man who could "take it". As we review his life, we find that despite all, Isaac emerged victorious. His great faith which he caught from Abraham his father, faith in God, sustained him.

Abraham Lincoln belongs to the ages and is counted among the world's immortals. But we are apt to forget that Abraham Lincoln's life was a succession of defeats. Born amidst poverty, he had to educate himself. In business he was a failure and spent seventeen years in paying off the debts incurred due to a worthless business partner. In his political career he met with defeat when he ran for the legislature of his state, when he ran for Congress and even for the Senate and Vice-Presidency of the United States. But in the face of all defeats Abraham Lincoln did become the greatest President of the United States, a man of undying fame.

Among modern Jews, a man who can serve as a pattern-personality of great courage was Franz Rosenzweig. This German Jew knew spiritual crises as well as physical suffering. After years of self-searching he dedicated his culture and his wealth toward the heightening of Judaism. He learned Hebrew in the trenches as a soldier during World War I. In the midst of shell-fire he began to work on a new book on Judaism, "Star Of Redemption", now a classic. In the very prime of life he was struck down by a hopeless paralysis. From 1922-29, though bedridden, with his power of speech and movement gradually leaving him, he continued through the help of a devoted helpmate and friend to labour in the cause of Jewish culture. His translation of the Bible in a limpid German has won for him admiration and honour.

Amidst all torture of flesh and physical agony, Rosenzweig, the helpless invalid, never gave up courage. All who visited him were more than inspired by his sweetness and saintliness. When about to die, and he knew it, he conveyed through his tortured groans his gratitude to God Who permitted him to write some works on Judaism. He spoke of love as mightier than death and thanked God for the love of his devoted wife and the joy of friendships he experienced. We do need such heroic souls as our good companions now.

CALLS ON ISRAELIS

the public a feeling of injustice and we will have to revive an effective control system to break the back of the black market."

Dr. Joseph added that the best way of liquidating the black market naturally was by increasing the supply of scarce goods. But this is impossible in a short period. Therefore, food rationing and control are the only path until Israel succeeds in expanding production. Controls are undesirable but essential for the public well being. It is equally certain that the control system cannot succeed without public cooperation.

Dr. Joseph announced the formation of regional committees to consider problems of supply and advise him on methods of improvement of supply and distribution. He proposed the establishment of committees in every quarter of every city and village, attached to the district food inspector, these committees to comprise mostly housewives to report all cases of black marketing, profiteering, and insolence. He called on all citizens to cooperate and give complaints or suggestions for improvement either directly to his Ministry or to the district committees or in special complaint and suggestion boxes which he proposed be set up throughout the country.

Dr. Joseph concluded by saying that he proposes periodically to talk to the nation to report progress and explain frankly what is being done and why. He begged the public to show a little patience, as the Government is unable to show improvements in twenty-four hours. It is impossible to buy food for 1,600,000 citizens in one day. Months of suffering may be required before a change in the face of things but "it is my earnest hope that it it within our power to achieve our goal."

He concluded the interview with the New York Times by saying that Americans should help "materialistically and spiritually" those democratic Germans who were trying to rebuild a better Germany. "Not all Germans are malefactors," he said.

plementation and so far progress along that line has been "slow and meager."

Discussing the neo-Nazi movements, such as the Socialist Reich party, the retiring Assistant High Commissioner said they were "disquieting," but had not "reached the point where they are alarming." Asked whether he had changed his mind about the Germans since he had come there, Mr. Buttenwieser replied: The Germans are less flexible-minded than I thought they were. I may have underestimated the religious and political cleavages in the country.

"The Germans are slower on some of the more democratic concepts than I had believed. I do not think, for example, there has been sufficient democratic progress in the field of education. Most emphatically, I have discovered that the Germans do not cooperate with each other. They do not seem

Tom Gard's Note Book

The Gards rely almost entirely on native material for Christmas decorations, other than lights and fancy tree ornaments.

Every year the whole family has a cone-hunting spree in the country. Occasionally we draw the ire of some "country cousin" but we usually try to secure them in well-wooded areas that are little frequented. We journey forth again when it comes time to gather evergreen boughs for our wreaths and other decorative purposes.

Christmas Table Centre

The Christmas table centre we used last year is illustrated. What could be more typically Canadian than the pressed oak or maple leaves and the collection of cones? Some of the cones can be dipped in bright red and bright green paint to add color to the arrangement. This year we plan to include evergreens to replace the leaves. In case you are interested in making the candle stick holders, instructions are also given along with a couple of designs.

Cone Place Markers

To complete the slogan "let's make it an evergreen Christmas", place markers are made from cones. Gather cones from the Austrian pine, larch and Jack pine when they are dry. Leave them in a sunny window or on top of the furnace overnight. The warmth will open them. Three types of cone place markers that have been used are illustrated. The whole family has a share in making them. This adds to the interest and the anticipation for that day of days so quickly approaching. It is fun drawing on one's imagination to help make the cones look as realistic as possible. It is surprising how closely some do resemble different types of birds when they are carefully selected, placed and finished. All I hope is that you have as much fun in your house as we have in ours preparing for Christmas.
